6. Open Response:

- ^{6.1)} What are the strengths of this course?
- Coursework is incredibly forgiving for an online class and required materials were provided for free. Mr. Rey is extremely clear with instructions and is, from my experience, a professional instructor.
- How organized the D2L is.
- Lectures on course material and other interesting facts.
- The strength of this course is how you it is set up. It helps me out to focus more on the work and to get help if you need it.
- ^{6.2)} What changes would you recommend that would improve this course?
- Give more examples of what he wanted the assignments to look like.
- N/A
- Nothing.
- While I am generally pleased, Mr. Rey has taught us contradictory and outdated information often of a highly political nature. I understand that we are entitled to our own opinions, and I do not wish to tattle on him for disagreements. However, Mr. Rey has pushed a narrative that denies climate change and promotes lax government regulations through controversial or outdated information. I do not believe these comments are necessary for a introduction to business class, especially as many of its participants are young people simply wishing to start a small business and not going into economics or political science, courses not currently offered at the college (though transfer programs are available, in fairness.)
- ^{6.3)} Any further, constructive comments?
